

PI Math Club is pleased to present a talk by

Dr. Drew Swartz
Data Scientist at IRI Chicago

“A Chat about Data Science Careers”

Data Science is one of the most popular careers in STEM today. But "data science" is also a relatively new term in society's lexicon, so you may be unfamiliar with what exactly a data scientist does. In this talk, I will shed some light on the much hyped field of data science, all from the perspective of a former academic mathematician. I will discuss my own career path from Ph.D. student to data scientist, technical trends in the field, and some parting career advice for those interested in breaking into the field. I would like this to be a casual discussion, so please bring lots of questions!

Monday, April 30, 2018

at noon

in KT 216

Open to all interested.

Free pizza and pop following the talk.