Note that these pronoun / adjectives follow a modified 1st and 2nd declension pattern. All pronouns will show -ius in the genitive singular and normally an -i in the dative singular (but note huic). Note also the unusual neuter in the nominative plurals haec and quae.

Ablative of Price

The price of an object is in the ablative case without preposition:

Tanta gemma sola octōgintā sēstertiis constat. Such a gem alone costs 80 sesterces.

Suppression of Antecedent with qui, quae, quod

The antecedent of the relative pronoun qui, quae, quod can (and regularly is) suppressed in Latin. This is unlike English usage, which requires an explicit antecedent to the relative pronoun who, which.

Qui tabernam habet tabernius est. He who has a shop is a shopkeeper.
