

Gesta Romanorum 273 King Lear

Theodosius in civitate Romana regnavit prudens valde et potens; qui tres filias pulchras	1
habebat, dixitque filiae seniori: "Quantum diligis me?"	2
At illa: "Certe plus quam me ipsam."	3
Ait ei pater: "Et te ad magnas divitias promovebo." Statim ipsam dedit uni regi opulento	4 et potenti in uxorem.	5
Post haec venit ad secundam filiam et ait ei: "Quantum diligis me?"	6
At illa: "Tantum sicut me ipsam." Imperator vero eam cuidam duci tradidit in uxorem.	7
Et post haec venit ad tertiam filiam et ait ei: "Quantum me diligis?"	8
At illa: "Tantum sicut vales et non plus neque minus."	9
Ait ei pater: "Ex quo ita est, non ita opulenter ero maritare sicut et sorores tuae." Tradidit	10 eam cuidam comiti in uxorem.	11

erūs, ī – m – master of a house marītō (1) – to marry

opulenter – adv – richly, sumptuously opulentus, a, um – adj – wealthy, opulent

prōmoveō, ēre, mōvī, motum – to move forward, advance prudēns, entis – adj – prudent

rēgnō (1) – to rule

Rōmānus, a, um – adj – Roman secundus, a, um – adj – second senior, ḍris – adj – older

Theodosius, ī – m – Theodosius

valdē – adv – very

1. Theodosius – not the historical figure.

2. seniōrī – note the language change. This is comparative in morphology, yet superlative in meaning. It's similar to how the modern Romance languages work.

3. At illa – introduces daughter's dialog.

4. ipsam – intensifies by highlighting the antecedent's absence when used as a pronoun.

5. in uxōrem – in marriage; literally “into wife”.

7. Tantum – note how it echoes the quantum from the question in the previous line.

cuidam ducī – to some duke; not just a leader.

9. et nōn – another way of saying nec.

10. Ex quō ita est – for this reason; literally “from which so it is”.

erō – not the future of sum.

marītāre – getting married; an alternate form of marītarīs.

(Or worse, a passive imperative. Or supply dēbēs if you really need it to be an infinitive, but then ask yourself: where's the accusative for this transitive verb?)

et – even

11. cuidam comitī – to some count; not just an associate.

Accidit cito post haec, quod imperator bellum contra regem Aegypti habebat. Rex vero 1 imperatorem de imperio fugabat, unde bonum refugii habere non poterat. Scripsit litteras anulo 2 suo signatas ad primam filiam suam, quae dixit, quod patrem suum plus quam se ipsam dilexit, 3 ut ei succurreret in sua necessitate, eo quod de imperio expulsus erat. Filia cum has litteras eius 4 legisset, viro suo regi casum primo narrabat. 5

Ait rex: "Bonum est, ut succurramus ei in hac sua magna necessitate. Colligam 6 exercitum meum et cum toto posse meo adiuvabo eum." 7 Ait illa: "Istud non potest fieri sine magnis expensis. Sufficit, quod ei concedatis, 8 quamdiu est extra imperium suum, quinque milites, qui ei associentur." Et sic factum est. Filia 9 patri rescripsit, quod aliud auxilium ab ea habere non posset nisi quinque milites de sumptibus 10 regis in societate sua. 11

adiuvō, āre, adiūvī, adiūtum – to help

Aegyptus, ī – f – Egypt

ānulus, ī – m – ring

assocīō (1) – to join with expendō, ere, dī, ēnsum – to weigh out

expellō, ere, pulī, pulsum – to drive out, eject extrā – p + acc – outside of posse – n indecl – manpower, often military quamdiū – adv – as long as quīnque – adj – five sufficiō, ere, fēcī, fectum – to meet the need, suffice

sumptus, ūs – m – outlay, expense

1. quod – introduces indirect speech.

2. bonum – benefit.

ānulō suō – means by which signātās happens.

3. sē ipsam – herself.

quod – indirect speech again.

4. eī – him; dative complement of succurreret.

succurreret – imperfect subjunctive; shows purpose after ut.

This is why the emperor write the letter.

suā – refers to the emperor; reflexive possessives are not as tightly reflexive in Medieval Latin, like here.

eō quod – for the reason that.

5. legisset – pluperfect subjunctive after cum.

6. succurrāmus – present subjunctive; shows result after ut.
eī – him; dative complement of succurrāmus.

suā – refers to the emperor; Medieval reflexives!

7. cum tōtō posse meō – with my whole posse; that's right, posse is posse.

8. concēdātis – present subjunctive; shows result after quod.
associentur – present subjunctive; consecutive quī-clause used to show limit (but that probably just muddies a perfectly understandable thing).

10 quod – introduces indirect speech
nisi – other than; this word can be tricky.

11. suā – properly reflexive here.

Imperator cum hoc audisset, contristatus est valde et infra se dicebat: "Heu mihi, tota 1 spes mea erat in seniore filia mea, eo quod dixit, quod plus me dilexit quam se ipsam, et propter 2 hoc ad magnam dignitatem ipsam promovi." 3

Scripsit statim secundae filiae, quae dixit "Tantum te diligo quantum me ipsam", quod 4 succurreret ei in tanta necessitate. At illa cum audisset, viro suo denunciabat et ipsi consiliavit, 5 ut nihil aliud ei concederet nisi victum et vestitum, quamdiu viveret, honeste pro tali rege, et 6 super hoc litteras patri suo rescripsit. 7

Imperator cum hoc audisset, contristatus est valde, dicens: "Deceptus sum per duas 8 filias. Iam temptabo tertiam, quae mihi dixit 'Tantum te diligo, quantum vales.'" Litteras scripsit 9 ei, ut ei succurreret in tanta necessitate, et quomodo sorores suae ei respondebant. Tertia filia 10 cōnsiliō (1) – to consult contristō (1) – to make sad dēcipiō, ere, cēpī, ceptum – to trap, cheat, deceive dēnuntiō (1) – to declare heu – interj – alas infrā – prep + acc – below, under

prōmoveō, ēre, mōvī, motum – to move forward, advance

secundus, a, um – adj – second

senior, ὅris – adj – older

succurrō, ere, ī, cursūm – to run under, aid, help

temptō (1) – to try, test

valdē – adv – very

victus, ūs – m – sustenance, nourishment, victuals

1.5. imperator – in the topic position before cum.
audisset – syncopated form of audīvisset; pluperfect subjunctive. Expressing when after cum.

infrā sē – to himself.

Heu – often has an attached dative.

2. eō quod – for the reason that.

3. ipsam – intensive pronoun.

5. succurreret – imperfect subjunctive; shows purpose after quod.

illa cum audisset – see line 1.

6. concēderet – imperfect subjunctive; shows what the plan will be after ut.

nisi – except.

vīveret – imperfect subjunctive; it's not indirect question, but we're not certain how long he'll live so subjunctive.

7. super hoc – about this (matter); super is edging toward its Romance language meaning of “about”.

8. Imperātor cum hoc audisset – compare this to line 1.
per – by; shows agent the way the modern Romance languages do. ¡Viva el cambio lingüístico! (Viva language change!)

cum vidisset inopiam patris sui, ad virum suum dixit: "Domine mi reverende, mihi succurre in 1 hac necessitate! Iam pater meus expulsus est ab hereditate sua." 2

Ait ei vir eius: "Quid vis tu, ut ei faciam?" 3

At illa: "Exercitum colligas et ad debellandum inimicum suum pergas cum eo!" 4

Ait comes: "Voluntatem tuam adimplebo." 5

Statim collegit magnum exercitum et sumptibus suis propriis cum imperatore perrexit ad 6 bellum. Victoriam obtinuit et imperatorem in imperio suo posuit. Tunc ait imperator: 7
"Benedicta hora, in qua genui filiam meam iuniorem. Ipsam minus aliis filiabus dilexi et mihi 8 in magna necessitate succurrit, et aliae filiae meae defecerunt, propter quod totum imperium 9 reliquero post decessum meum filiae meae iuniori." Et sic factum est. Post decessum patris filia 10 iunior regnavit et in pace vitam finivit. 11 adimpleō, ēre, ēvī, ētūm – to fill up benedicō, ere, dīxī, dictum – to bless, praise dēbellō (1) – to finish a war dēcēdō, ere, cessī, cesso – to go away, withdraw

expellō, ere, pulī, pulsum – to drive out, eject finiō (4) – to finish

hērēditās, tātis – f – inheritance inopia, ae – f – lack iūnior, ūris – adj – younger obtineō, ere, uī, tum – to have, get quod – conj – that

rēgnō (1) – to rule

reverendus, a, um – adj – inspiring awe, venerable

succurrō, ere, ī, cursūm – to run under, aid, help

sumptus, ūs – m – outlay, expense

1. virum – husband.

succurre – takes dative complement.

3. faciam – present subjunctive; introduced by ut.

4. colligās – present subjunctive; she's suggesting a course of action for her husband.

ad dēbellandum – to finish off the war; ad + gerund shows purpose.

suum – the not-quite-reflexive possessive. In classical Latin it would be ēius.

pergās – present subjunctive; still suggested course of action.

5. comes – count, not companion.

7. suō – once again, the not-quite-reflexive possessive.

8. Benedicta – supply est if you need it here.

Ipsam – intensive pronoun.

9. succurrit – takes dative complement (up online 8).

propter quod – because of which.
